A VALUABLE POULTRY BOOK

Greider's Complete Catalog for 1909 is the Finest Ever Issued by Him.

A book that will be read with a great deal of interest, on account of the rapid growth of the poultry industry and the profits to be realized in this field, is Greider's 1909 Catalog of Poultry and Supplies, prepared by B. H. Greider, the well-known poultryman of Rheems, Pa.

This book illustrates and describes all the leading breeds of fowl, their value and ability as money-makers, besides giving the lowest prices for stock and eggs for hatching, etc.

A chapter tells how to build the right kind of practical houses, showing plans and pictures, and suggests the necessary equipment for profitable use.

Feeding methods are explained, as well as the way to care for a flock so that they will keep in healthy condition and lay—especially in the cold weather, when eggs bring high prices.

Among the features included is a set of chromos—pictures of fowls in colors—that appeals to all lovers of poultry.

At the price asked—ten cents postpaid—this book is well worth sending for and should be in the hands of everyone interested in poultry raising on either a large or small scale. Enclose the price to B. H. Greider, at Rheems, Pa., and we believe you will be perfectly satisfied with the bargain.

ELDER R. H. MILLER.

Bro. Robert H. Miller, who was born in Shelby County, Kentucky, June 7, 1825, was a very remarkable man, considering his educational opportunities. His parents were in moderate circumstances, and when their son Robert was eleven years old they moved to Montgomery County, Indiana. Robert became a very diligent and apt student and in due time secured sufficient education to teach school. While teaching, he studied law and became quite skilled at the bar. He also grew into prominence as a political speaker, and during political campaigns was in considerable demand.

R. H. Miller.

At the age of twenty-five he married Sister Sarah Harshbarger, a very intelligent and devout woman, who was the means of leading him to the church. His conversion was thorough. He immediately closed his law practice and ceased delivering political addresses.

Shortly after uniting with the church, he was called to the ministry, and inside of a few years reached the eldership. He preached well from the start, and soon became one of the most noted preachers in his part of the State.

He entered upon the study of the Scriptures with rare zeal and intelligence, making the doctrine of the church a specialty. His strong doctrinal sermons brought him into prominence and led to his engaging in a number of debates, probably a dozen in all. He was at his best in a public discussion and probably never met his equal as a cool, careful and logical disputant. When in his prime he was doubtless the ablest defender of the doctrine of the Church of the Brethren ever known among us. He knew how to present an argument and make it stand for all there was in it.

As a debater he had some unique experiences. About 1873 the Brethren secured his services for a discussion in a town some distance from the railroad. His reputation as an able preacher and a fine debater had gone before him, so on the day for his arrival at the railroad station, where one of the brethren was to meet him and convey him to the place of discussion, a number of boys from the town made it a point to be at the depot in time to get a first glimpse of the famous preacher. Bro. Miller was naturally a fine-looking man. When he alighted from the train, and was greeted by the brother, who came to meet him, the boys scrutinized him with intense interest. In all their experiences they had never seen such a fine and intelligent looking man.

A large trunk was unloaded from the train and taken possession of by Bro. Miller and the brother who had met him. This trunk put the boys to surmising, and they soon decided that it was full of books. So, without waiting for further developments, they mounted their horses, and returned to their town in all possible haste, and told everybody they met that they had seen the great debater, that he was a fine-looking man, that he had a big trunk full of books, and was reading Greek, Hebrew and Latin all the time. Before Bro. Miller reached the town, everybody knew of his coming, the boys had spread the news everywhere, and the excitement was simply intense.

The stir made by the boys so affected public sentiment and the man Bro. Miller was to have met in debate, that the discussion actually fell through with and never came off. His opponent could not be induced to accept clearly-defined propositions, and so there was no debate. Bro. Miller used to tell, in an amusing way, how the boys in Southern Illinois spoiled a debate for him.

During his busy life in the ministry, Bro. Miller figured as a farmer, college president, author and corresponding editor. Few men among us have served on more Annual Meeting committees, and while he did not like this kind of work, he possessed a rare fitness for it. He produced and published the best defense of the doctrine of the church ever placed before the public. This book, The Doctrine of the Brethren Defended, has been widely circulated, and will long remain a standard work.

He lived at a period in the history of the church when his labors were very much needed and greatly appreciated, but the church did not give him the temporal aid that he should have had. Physically speaking, he was not a strong man, and much hard work devoted to making a living weakened his body and probably paved the way for his death. It is unfortunate that much of his strength had to be given to manual labor. All of his time should have been devoted to preaching and writing. He should have left several books, and did have some in contemplation, but never had time to write them.

In 1879 his wife passed into the heavenly Canaan and about two years later he married Sister Emma Norris, of Maryland, who, on March 8, 1892, sat by his bedside, in the residence of Bro. J. G. Royer, Mt. Morris, Ill., and saw her devout husband breathe his last and pass into the other world. He had come to Mt. Morris to deliver a series of discourses, which were to have been published, but soon took sick and never recovered. His remains were laid to rest in the Brethren cemetery near North Manchester, Ind.

MONKEY PLAYS JOKE.

A funny story is told of an Englishman who was in India and who owned a monkey that was as mischievous as most monkeys are. Looking out of his window one day the gentleman saw his cook plucking a fowl preparatory to cooking it for dinner. On the ground at a little distance lay the monkey pretending that he was dead, while a flock of crows were hopping about a little way distant, divided between the desire for the kitchen offal and the fear of the possibly shamming monkey. One crow, more adventurous than the rest, came within the magic distance and was instantly in the clutch of the monkey. At the same moment the cook, having finished trussing the fowl, put it into the pot and went away.

The monkey plucked the crow as he had just seen the cook pluck the fowl, took the fowl out of the pot, put the crow in and retired with his exchange. When the cook came back and saw the fowl left for his master's luncheon turned black, he was struck with terror, believing that the evil one had interfered to bring about such a startling result. Meanwhile the monkey was enjoying the fowl he had stolen.—Detroit News Tribune.

The New Butterfly Cream Separator. You've probably heard about this wonderful Cream Separator. It was exhibited at almost every big State and County Fair in the Central States last year, winning new laurels and making new friends everywhere. In competition with other machines the New Butterfly demonstrated its superior merit. It is the most efficient cream separator made, and yet we sell it for half the price paid for others. If you have only two or three cows the New Butterfly will more than pay for itself from the increased profits derived from its use. Our prices, detailed description, and our binding guarantee all contained in our special Cream Separator Catalog will be mailed free on request.

"THE ROSE OF JERICHO."

BY DEMETRIUS CHIRIGHOTIS.

I have heard about the Rose of Jericho, but never saw it except when traveling in the Holy Land. This marvelous plant grows and blooms in the great deserts of Palestine and Arabia.

Growing in the sultry sand, under the scorching sun, this ill-fitted plant leads a life quite unlike the plants in any other country; it never knows the shade of a large tree, or the refreshing dew of the morning. Its leaves are neither green nor flexible, but of an ashy, somber color and hard. The flowers are of a whitish brown.

It is a plant that naturally absorbs a great deal of water, but in the desert there is not much water, and when the last drop is taken up by the plant, then it gets dry and twists into a ball, but does not die. No, it does not die, for it is a courageous, living plant. It remains in this condition until, perchance, it enjoys more favorable surroundings.

The wind of the desert, blowing mercilessly, sharp and dry, reduces the plant to a poor state. Though the wind is unsparing for a while, yet this same wind eventually comes to its relief. It blows, and the rose that is fixed to the ground by a few weak roots, is torn up, rolled into a ball and carried far away.

Very often the place into which this rose is installed is also dry and sterile, like the former, though sometimes it meets with a little moisture and at once spreads its twigs, pushes open its little white flowers and dresses itself with the faint beauties with which nature has endowed it. No matter how dry the flower may be and evidently weathered out, yet it retains its own properties. Carry it where you will, keep it for any length of time you like, then dip it into water and very soon you will notice the twigs become flexible and the flowers apparently open.

Naturalists call this plant Anastatica (rising) flower, for it has the properties to survive and bloom as soon as it gets wet, though in its dried form it shows all signs of death. In retaining these life-giving properties, it is rightly considered as the symbol of eternity and the immortality of the soul.

The Arabs call it "Caf-Mariam," Mary's flower, and it is said to grow where Mary stood, when about to flee to Egypt with Jesus. Another tradition states that it first bloomed on the birth of Christ.

I believe it is good to think of the Rose of Jericho, because it is an example of courage and noble-mindedness. If we ever become sad or helpless, let us turn our minds to this brave, little plant, which the wind may uproot and tear from the ground, but can never really destroy!

Prof. John W. Wayland says:

"The 'Bicentennial Addresses' ('Two Centuries of the Church of the Brethren'), surpasses my expectations both as to size and contents, as well as in elegance of workmanship. It is one of the most interesting volumes our church has published, and should be received as such by our own people and others."

SARAH MAJOR.

Sister Sarah Righter Major, a sainted mother in Israel, at one time figured somewhat prominently in parts of the Brotherhood. She was born near Philadelphia, Aug. 29, 1808, and lived seventy-six years. She was a daughter of Bro. John Righter, a minister in the Brethren church, and grew to womanhood with good church environments. She had a good common school education, but no special attempt was made to favor her with a college course.

At the age of eighteen, while listening to a discourse preached by Harriet Livermore, a lady preacher of wide reputation in her day, and who occasionally held services in a few houses owned by the Brethren, she became sensibly convicted and at once applied for membership in the church at Philadelphia. Soon after her baptism she felt that it was her duty to preach the Gospel, and had considerable distress of mind regarding this feeling until she was questioned by her father concerning the cause of her depression in spirit. She told him that she was impressed with the thought that the Lord had called her to preach.

Her father was a prudent man, and told Bro. Peter Keyser, the principal minister in Philadelphia, about the talk he had with his daughter. Bro. Keyser was also a prudent as well as a very devout man, and greatly sympathized with the young sister. He had a talk with her about her call and urged her to enter upon the work of the ministry, in the way she was impressed. This she did, much to the comfort and edification of hundreds, who listened to her simple and earnest addresses.

There were those in the church who did not believe in sisters preaching, and this opposition the gifted young sister had to endure. Other congregations, hearing of her success as a preacher, invited her to come and hold meetings. To most of these calls she responded, and there was quite a demand for her services. There was something about her fine blending of intelligence, humility, simplicity and spirituality that drew people to her, and even those who were opposed to women preaching were generally favorably impressed by her touching discourses. While she was not very systematic about arranging the matter for her sermons, still she had a way of unfolding the Scriptures that attracted general attention. She was always impressive and interesting, and there were times when she grew eloquent.

After she had preached nearly sixteen years, and when she was thirty-four years old, she was married to Bro. Thomas Major, who was a minister in the Brethren church. Sister Major was never installed as a minister, but was simply permitted to preach. After her marriage she always traveled with her husband but went into the pulpit only when invited to do so. He would often read a scripture, make a few remarks, and then kindly ask his wife to speak.

She always wore the ample prayer covering seen in the accompanying photograph. Sometimes she did not remove her bonnet until she had spoken a few minutes. She had a very graceful way of untying the strings, removing her bonnet and handing it to her husband. In fact her every act before the public was graceful. Her gestures were natural and becoming her sex as well as her profession.

The next year after their marriage the Majors, as they were called, sold their property in Philadelphia, and moved to Ohio, finally settling in Highland County, in the bounds of the Fall Creek church. Under their well-directed labors many were converted and the church grew rapidly. Here they lived and labored until 1884 when the spirit of the gifted woman took its flight. Bro. Major closed his earthly pilgrimage four years later. They raised three children, and in addition to doing much in the way of preaching the Gospel, they gave all needed attention to their temporal affairs and prospered in life.

Sister Major's influence as a Christian teacher was not confined to the pulpit. She visited jails, infirmary institutions and other places, carrying to the people the Bread of Life. She was especially diligent in her religious work in families. Into whatever family she went with her message, she was welcomed and always made a lasting impression on those she visited.

But she lived at a time when she had to face much opposition upon the part of those who were opposed to women preaching. There were times when this outspoken opposition pained her noble heart. Still she bore it all, and gave as little occasion for offense as possible. While she felt that her call was from the Lord she did not purposely impose her message on those who did not care to receive the Bread of Life from a woman. Had she come on to the stage of action seventy years later, she would have been more generally received. Were she living now, practically every pulpit in the Brotherhood would be at her service, and it would be impossible for her to fill half of the calls she would receive. But she served her day and generation well, and we rejoice that we are permitted to pen this short sketch of her life, and labors, and to present to our readers the first photograph of her ever given to the public through the medium of the press.

INSIDE INFORMATION.

A Christian Scientist found his young son doubled up with pain as a result of too frequent trips to the apple orchard, where many choice green apples were to be had.

"What's the matter, Bobbie?" he asked.

"I ate too many apples," said Bobbie; "and, oh, how my stomach hurts!"

"Your stomach doesn't ache," said his father; "you just think it does."

"Well, you may think so," said Bobbie, "but I know. I've got inside information."—Harper's Magazine.

THE ELEPHANT CAN COUNT.

Many animals know how to count, and the elephant is specially clever at arithmetic. It is told of one of these giant creatures, that was in the habit of having twenty pieces of cake given to him daily for his dinner, that he found it out at once when only nineteen were placed before him. He was so much offended about this that he refused to touch a morsel till a twentieth piece of cake was added to the rest.

ELDER JOHN H. UMSTAD.

Bro. John Umstad, who was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 1, 1802, was an original character, peculiar in his ways at times, but an earnest and devout Christian man. He had only a fair education, but nature had endowed him with a fine brain, a very cheerful disposition and he early attracted attention as a strong and original thinker of pleasing and attractive manners.

He was nearly thirty years old when he made a religious profession. A revival was held in his neighborhood in 1831, when he, Isaac Price, and a number of others, were converted and added to the church. He had a good influence among the people and when he came out from the world and accepted Jesus as his Savior, it made quite a stir in the community. Three years later he was called to the ministry and commenced preaching the Gospel. The Greentree church was built near his home, and here he did his best work as a minister.

In preaching the Gospel in the Greentree church, he was associated with Bro. Isaac Price, both of them having been set apart to the work at the same time. Bro. Umstad developed into a speaker of excellent ability, noted more, however, for his earnestness, cheerfulness and winning ways than for his depth of thought and logic. He believed God to be a loving Father, and he presented him as such to his hearers. His appeals to the sinner were almost irresistible. He told them what the Gospel demanded of them, pointed out the danger of rejecting the easy terms of pardon, then presented his earnest appeals in such a pleasing manner as to almost captivate those who listened to his discourses.

In his day he was a strong man among the Brethren, loved and respected wherever known. In appearance he was one of the noblest of men, and though of a commanding bearing, yet he was as meek and as simple as a child. To everybody he was a friend, both at home and abroad. Though of a lively disposition, wherever he went among strangers he was singled out as a preacher. His preaching did not cover a broad field. He preferred to limit his lines of thought and do good work. This led to his having a number of favorite texts and themes that he used quite frequently.

Before he joined the church he wore very fashionable clothes; but when he was converted all this disappeared. It took no arguments or persuasions to induce him to give up his worldly ways. With him plain attire for Christians was a principle that became a part of his very make-up, and he found it easy to fall into the ways of the church. He remained faithful until death and preached his last sermon only a short time before he died, at the age of seventy-one. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, fourteen ministers of the Church of the Brethren preceding the corpse to the place of interment, while many ministers of other denominations followed in the procession. Thus went to rest one of God's chosen ministers,—a man who stood firm for his convictions, and yet his manner of life was so agreeable, so cheerful and so honest, pure and sincere, that he died without an enemy. Those who knew him love to think of him as a man of God. He did not wait for a revival to talk to sinners about their soul's salvation. On meeting strangers he often asked them if they loved Jesus. Many of his apt remarks have come down to the present generation, and in the community where he lived he will be quoted for generations to come. He so impressed others with his originality, peculiarity, aptness, agreeableness and love for his Master that he will not soon be forgotten.

Bro. Geo. D. Zollers, who knew Bro. Umstad personally, and often heard him preach has this to say of the devout and venerable preacher:

Eld. Umstad possessed rare natural abilities, and was also a man of considerable mental culture. He was a devout servant of the Lord, clad with the Christian graces, and simplicity was a prominent trait of his life. He seemed to have a kind word for everybody, and he could readily adapt himself to the varied human temperaments, and was an apt conversationalist. His preaching was extemporaneous, and at times he grew very eloquent and soared in oratorical flight.

He had a good command of language and could afford attraction to his audience. He was full of the Spirit of God, and was moved by the inspiration of the occasion. He carried the influence of his public efforts into private life, and greatly cheered the homes where his visits were paid.

The first time I met Bro. Umstad in a personal interview, was soon after my return from the seafaring life; it was after my admission into the Church of the Brethren, when my heart glowed with love. This occurred five miles from the residence of Bro. Umstad. The news of my reception was circulated over my home country, and Bro. Umstad, with others, was familiar with the event. I was subsequently working at my trade, near the Greentree church, Pa., and went to spend a night in Bro. Umstad's home.

That night, however, two of his relatives came from McVeytown, and utilized a good portion of his time in the evening. But he desired a special interview with me, and as I was fatigued from mechanical toil, that day, he proposed that I should retire, and he would call me betimes in the morning, then he would talk and ask me questions, about marine life. This was accomplished the following morning, after the season of devotion, while I ate my breakfast, and he took his seat beside me and plied his questions. As I had to effect my departure early to resume my work, we bade each other farewell, he pronouncing his warm benedictions upon me.

At another time I visited at his home, after I had lived in Illinois a number of years, in company with other brethren who lived in my own native, historic homeland. All were familiar with Bro. John Umstad. Our social time was most precious, and our religious conversation edifying. We had a season of prayer together before parting, and Bro. Umstad made the closing prayer with the simplicity of a child. When he had prayed for all present, had asked God's blessings upon his guests, he said: "Lord bless Bro. Umstad, too." I can hear the ringing of the simple and fervent words yet.

The next, and last time, perhaps, that I met him, was in the Hickory Grove church, Carroll County, Ill., where I lived at the time. I was then a minister. He stopped first at Eld. Michael Sisler's, just across the way from my home. I passed through the gate to enter the road, en route to a church meeting, as the church was only twenty-five rods from my residence. I saw Bro. Umstad hastening towards me, and he surprised me by his sudden and unexpected approach. He greeted me with his countenance gleaming with the sunshine of heavenly love, and poured out the effusions of his heart in these memorable words: "Hold fast that which thou hast, let no man take thy crown."

He attended our love feast during this visit, was the main preacher, and officiated. At the preaching service the Hickory Grove house was filled to its full capacity, and Bro. Umstad was urged to take his position near the center of the house. He walked forward as directed, rubbing his hands and quoting his text from memory, "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor in the Lord is not in vain." 1 Cor. 15: 58.

"THE INFLUENCE OF MISSIONS ON THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN."

During the Des Moines Conference, thousands of brethren and sisters listened with intense interest to the masterful address of Bro. W. M. Howe on the above topic. If you did not hear the address, turn to page 291 of "Two Centuries of the Church of the Brethren," and read the opening paragraph. Of course you'll read the other eleven pages and then you will want to read the other twenty-three addresses. Prices and agents' terms upon application.

Eld. David Rittenhouse, who was a native of Pennsylvania, and had been a colaborer with Bro. Umstad, in the Greentree church, before he settled in Illinois, followed Bro. Umstad to the central part of the house. It was an impressive scene to see these veterans of the Cross, in such close fraternal unity. Eld. Umstad preached a soul-inspiring sermon, and held his audience spell-bound. He alluded to the resurrection power, as the confirmation of the Christian's hope. He portrayed the binding force of our relationship with Christ, and the controlling power of God over the forces of nature, whose voice was more potent than the roaring elements, and whose voice would raise the dead.

I might relate much more concerning him, but let this one incident suffice. On a time he reared a building and procured his mechanics. They all knew his devotional turn and expected family worship, but he, thinking the pressure of business too great, refrained. The mechanics were surprised, and Bro. Umstad felt condemned, and was greatly mortified for this lost opportunity to benefit his neighbors and honor his God. The next morning the laborers did not expect it, owing to his proceedings the previous day. Bro. Umstad was humiliated and confessed his neglect to the workmen. And then, with childlike simplicity resumed his regular order of devotion and praise. This shows the integrity of the man.

THE NEEDLE.

All the children were asked to bring to the grammar class a short original composition about some article they saw in daily use, and this is what one little boy wrote:

"The needle is a sewing tool. It is composed of two parts—the point and the eye. The eye is made of air, and is what you stick the thread through. The point is made of steel, and is what you stick through the cloth."

DINED IN THE KITCHEN.

"When General Grant stopped at the Palmer House in Chicago on his return from his tour of the world," said a man who was there at the time, "the steward was all but stupefied one noon at seeing the ex-president slide in at the kitchen door as though escaping from some one.

"'I am sorry to trouble you, sir,' he said, as though asking a great favor, 'but may I have a little corned beef and cabbage?

"'Why, certainly,' the steward replied;

'but shan't I send it out to you in the dining room?'

"'No,' he answered; 'I'll eat it right here if you'll let me sit down.'

"So a place on the rough board table, where the cook had been fixing the meat, was cleared, and Grant drew up a stool and set to, and the way he got away with that corned beef and cabbage was a caution. When he had finished, he laid down his knife and fork with a funny sigh of satisfaction, put one hand on the steward's shoulder and said:

"'Young man, I don't suppose you care for that at all, but if you had had to eat what I have for the past few months it would taste like a dinner for the gods. It tastes homey!'

"The ex-president had dined with everybody from the queen down, but that cabbage and corned beef doubtless reminded him of the time when he was not so well known, but probably far happier—when people in St. Louis called him 'captain' when they spoke to him and bought the wood he carted into town to sell."

JOHN H. FILMORE.

BY J. D. HAUGHTELIN.

The subject of this sketch was born at Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 16, 1820, and died in Van Buren County, Iowa, Dec. 9, 1889. Between these two dates the scenes and labors of a varied, busy and useful life were enacted. Of his ancestors

John H. Filmore.

I have nothing, except that his father, in an exciting chase after a deer, overheated himself and died suddenly.

As a boy John was lively, mischievous, up early and at it all day long, with a host of admiring friends around him to whom he was true, though sometimes they were the victims of his wits and pranks. His education was limited, but his keen conception and wide-awake, observing nature enabled him to increase and reduce to practice his store of information.

He was a man of strong individuality; bold to declare and defend his convictions. This caused him to be talked about much by those best acquainted with him. Though I never lived nearer than sixty miles of him, I often heard of him before I first met him in September, 1864 (war times). He took much delight in wood-chopping, and did a great deal of it. It was natural for him to obey the injunction, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Even in his old days he took great pleasure in having a neat, orderly woodpile near his kitchen door, and he delighted in doing his best, whether chopping wood or preaching the Gospel.

In 1849 he was married to Mrs. Sarah Hyatt. (The first time she saw him he was discoursing on the temperance problem.) To them were born three sons,—Wm. H., David T. and Jacob C., and one daughter, Rachel A., now the wife of Bro. J. T. Couser, of Britton, S. Dak. Her mother lives with them.

In 1850, near Washington, D. C., Bro. Filmore sought religion by the shouting Methodist mourner bench route, so popular in the East in those days. His energetic, investigating mind soon caused him to long for something more substantial than the emotional and sensational. By reading the Scriptures he learned that "the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation." Coming in contact with the Brethren, in Maryland, he, in 1854, accepted the fuller light, and soon became a very earnest advocate of their teaching. In 1856 he was chosen to the ministry; in Somerset County, Pennsylvania. The next year he moved to Waterloo, Iowa. His zeal and impulsiveness soon brought him to prominent notice. This increased his self-reliance, which, in time, brought him into trouble which caused him to exercise his wits in making his defense. "Forgetting the things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before," caused him to become a ready talker and quite successful, especially in new territory.

This peculiarity in his make-up caused him to move often. As nearly as I can learn, he moved from Waterloo to Linn, Butler, Benton and Jefferson Counties, successively, in Iowa, then to Grundy and Davis Counties, in Missouri, thence to Lee County, Illinois; from there to Adams, Harrison and Shelby Counties, in Iowa, and from there back to Jefferson County in his declining days.

Being quite sensitive he was very easily elated or depressed by environments. One incident will illustrate: He held a series of meetings in a new place, with marked success. This elated him. Before starting home a number of generous sisters laid together and procured a dress pattern for his wife, and some valuable presents for the children. These were given into the hands of a good, reliable deacon to give to him. He, seeing how elated Bro. Filmore was, presented the gifts with the following little speech: "Bro. John, here are some presents the sisters are sending your family, but we don't want you to think it is pay for your preaching. We have brethren here who can preach just as well as you." It struck a tender spot. He said to the brethren who took him to the train, "Did you ever know a man to get such a downsetting to start home with?"

At a certain place in Iowa his aggressiveness caused a minister of another denomination to challenge him for a discussion. Some of the brethren opposed his accepting it, and some encouraged him. He either underestimated the ability of his opponent, or overestimated his own, but he accepted and was defeated. The Brethren in general were not willing to leave it go at that, but soon arranged to have Bro. Quinter discuss with his opponent. When Bro. Quinter came and was introduced to the opponent, N. A. McConnell, Bro. Filmore said to Mr. Mc-

Connell, "You will find you will not have John Filmore to handle this time." Quickly the reply came, "I am aware of that, I have a gentleman to meet this time." The thrust wounded him, but he did not lose his wits, as his reply shows. He gravely replied, "I wish Bro. Quinter could say as much."

Upon one occasion I heard him in all the fervor of his soul, contending for the cause of his Master, and, catching the eye of a veteran brother, who was well acquainted with his troubles and weaknesses, he exclaimed, "Oh! Brethren, if I could only live it as well as I can preach it." He was called by the church to one of his successful earlier fields of labor where he spent his last days peacefully in the service of his Master.

Dec. 9, 1889, being somewhat indisposed, he was sitting in his easy chair, singing, "In that sweet by and by," when he peacefully closed his eyes in death. His mortal remains were laid in the narrow limits of the grave at Libertyville to await the call of the resurrection morning.

Thus ended the busy life of one who had labored in many different parts of the Master's vineyard. May the good seed he has sown bring forth a bountiful harvest.

DOG PLAYS TRICK.

Several year ago an elderly lady rented a large summer place at Fox Lake, Ill., and with the house, stables, and grounds there went a dog, which was thrown in for good measure. In the library of the house was a large, comfortable Morris chair, the qualities of which appealed strongly to the old lady, but also unfortunately these same qualities had impressed the dog, and whenever the old lady would go to sit in the chair she would find the dog curled up in it.

Being afraid of the dog, she did not dare to order him out, but would go to the window and call "cats." The dog would rush to the window and while he was barking and looking for his natural enemies the lady would slip quietly into the chair.

One day, however, the lady reached the chair first, and the dog coming in, found her comfortably reading. He immediately went to the window and began barking furiously.

The old lady went to see what the trouble was, and the dog ran back and jumped into the chair.—Chicago Tribune.

ELDER PETER NEAD.

BY JOHN SMITH.

The Nead family came to America from Germany before the War of the Revolution, and located at Hagerstown, Md. They were identified with the Lutheran church. Eld. Peter Nead was born at Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 7, 1796. He had three brothers, Matthias, Daniel and John. All lived to a good old age. Matthias was a Lutheran. He lived and died in Greencastle, Pa. Daniel and John were members of the Church of the Brethren. Both of them labored in the ministry, and died in Tennessee. Peter's father owned slaves, who did his work. This gave Peter an opportunity to attend school, where he acquired what was then considered a fair education.

His grandfather offered to educate Peter, and fit him to be a Lutheran minister. Peter was not so inclined, and did not accept the offer. He spent some time clerking in a store. When the family moved to Frederick County, Virginia, he served an apprenticeship as a tanner, his father being a tanner by trade.

About this time Peter became impressed with the thought of salvation, and united with the M. E. church, and remained with that church several years. He held the office of class leader and was permitted to preach. He was not, however, fully reconciled to some of the doctrines of that church. He commenced to preach as an independent preacher, traveling from place to place, and continued his preaching about two years.

About this time there chanced to fall into his hands a pamphlet written by Eld. Benjamin Bowman, of Rockingham County, Virginia. It was by means of this little book that he first learned that the Brethren as a people held the doctrines and ideas advanced in this pamphlet. He was much pleased and determined to find these people, to learn something more about them.

Accordingly he made his way to the settlement of the Brethren, and attended one of their love feasts. Here, on learning further of the doctrine, as held forth by the Brethren, and seeing how they observed the ordinances, he concluded that these were the humble and obedient people of the Lord. He therefore made application for admission into the church, and was received. The Brethren gave him liberty to fill all his appointments previously made. He was in the church but a short time until he was elected to the ministry. He was elected on the same day that Bro. John Kline was elected as a deacon.

Bro. Nead's manner of dress was more stylish than was the custom of the Brethren. One feature of his attire, offensive to the Brethren, was a tall, white hat, after the style of the clergy in those days. Bro. Nead was so earnest in his work, and enjoyed his church relationship so much that they were slow to ask him to put the hat away. Finally old Bro. Benjamin Bowman decided that he could remove that hat without offending Bro. Nead. So, one Sunday, after the close of the preaching services, at his own house, he asked Bro. Nead to take a walk with him. Entering the barn, he closed the door, and took him to the farther end of the floor, where he approached a fanning mill. Reaching into the mill, he drew out a new, low-crown hat, and said, "Bro. Peter, the Brethren feel that the hat you wear is not in harmony with the humble profession you have made. We love you, and desire that you may do a great deal of good in the church. Now, Bro. Peter, here is a new Brethren's hat that I bought for you." Holding the hat close to his face, he said, "Will you wear it?" Bro. Nead said, "Yes, I will." He took the hat and never wore any other kind of hat as long as he lived. The kind officer and pupil will be glad for the historical information contained in Chapter 10 of "Two Centuries of the Church of the Brethren." It contains two addresses on "The Sunday-school Work of the Church," (1) "The Importance of the Sunday-school Work," by Eld. I. B. Trout, and (2) "The Growth of the Sunday-school Movement," by Elizabeth Myer. This one chapter is well worth the price of the book. The other twenty-two addresses are just as valuable. This book is a fitting souvenir of the Bicentennial Year. Ask our agent about prices.

manner in which Bro. Bowman approached him, had such an effect upon him that he changed all his clothing and came in the full order of the church.

At this time the preaching among the Brethren was nearly all in the German language, but a strong desire began to be manifested for English preaching also. As Bro. Nead spoke the English, his labors were much sought after. In fact, for a long time he was called the "English preacher."

About this time he became acquainted with Elizabeth Yount, daughter of Bro. Daniel Yount, of Rockingham County, Virginia, whom he married Dec. 20, 1825. Then he settled down and carried on the tanning business. He also frequently taught school during the winter season, but, as his ministerial aid was needed, and was called for quite generally, he could not give the business much of his personal attention.

In 1833 he wrote his "Primitive Christianity," which he had printed at Staunton, Va., and bound in leather. It contained 138 pages, and was one of the first books by the Brethren of those days. It treated on the ordinances of the Lord's house, and the first principles of the Gospel, in a plain and comprehensive manner. It met with a general circulation, and did much toward the enlightening of the minds and understandings of many who read the book. In many instances was this book the means of persons coming into the church.

In 1840 he moved from Rockingham County, Virginia, to Augusta County, where he lived two and a half years. From here he moved to Botetourt County, where he lived five years.

In 1845 he wrote a pamphlet of 131 pages, treating on baptism for the remission of sins, faith alone, prayerless doctrine, the present state of the world, corrupted Christendom, and the true church of Christ. This he had printed at Fincastle, Va.

In 1848 he moved to Ohio, and finally located on a farm nine miles northwest of Dayton, where he remained until his death.

In 1850 he compiled his "Theology," usually called "Nead's Theology." This comprised his first two books, with an addition of sixty-seven pages, making a volume of 472 pages. This book was printed at Dayton. It was stereotyped, and though the first edition was large, it was soon exhausted. A number of smaller editions have since followed. This work has become one of the standard works of the church. In 1866 he wrote his "Wisdom and Power of God, as Displayed in Creation and Redemption," a book of 352 pages.

Bro. Nead lived twenty-seven years in the Lower Stillwater church. The greater part of that time was spent in the cause of his Master, attending preaching services and business meetings. He was considered an able counselor, and hence was often called upon to assist in council meetings, and on church business generally. He was also frequently connected with the work of district meeting and Annual Meeting. He served on the Standing Committee at twelve Annual Meetings. Our brother was a man of strong convictions, and was not afraid to speak his mind on any matter that was before the meeting. He was one of the firm pillars of the Brotherhood, and did what he thought was right for the good of the church. In fact, his great concern was for the church, her purity and prosperity. He was also an able preacher. His voice was clear and strong, and his discourses were interesting and enlightening. He had a good, strong mind and memory. So far as the Scriptures were concerned, he had the greater portion of the Bible at his command. In his preaching he could quote from any part of the Scriptures which he desired to bring in as testimony, to strengthen his discourse. In all his labors in the church he had in view the maintaining of the ancient principles of the Church of the Brethren, and with this in view he was largely instrumental in starting the "Vindicator," a monthly publication.

When Bro. Nead first united with the Church of the Brethren he was so strongly impressed with the beauty of the doctrine of the Bible, as understood by the Brethren, that it became a part of his very nature, and he could not get his mind away from those principles, which he had so cheerfully accepted. So thoroughly convinced was he that the doctrine of the Brethren is in harmony with the Bible, that he was prompted to live a consecrated life, worthy of imitation by any one. He was held in high esteem by all the members of the church. He was a good housekeeper and father in the church. While he was firm in his ruling, he was mild in his expressions, and exercised patience in all his church work.

He had strong and fixed habits. For his times of studying and reading he had his special hours. He would rise from his bed at three o'clock, and eat a few mouthfuls of dry bread. After walking about the room for a few minutes, he would take up his work,—reading or writing, till six o'clock. He claimed he could do more and better work, and commit more scripture passages to memory during those three hours, than in any other part of the twenty-four hours.

His habits of punctuality were very strong. When he made a promise to meet any one at a certain time he was always there. At the church services he was never known to be late. When it was time for services, he would open the meeting, even if only five or six persons were present. In all of his dealings with other people he was prompt in doing his part.

His health was quite good. He attributed that largely to his manner of dressing. When the weather was cold, he would put on an ample supply of clothing. He was greatly blessed with good eyesight. He never wore glasses, and could read any print to the end of his life, without the aid of glasses. He always wore a wad of cotton in his ears, summer and winter, claiming that this and the warm dressing were a preventive against head diseases, and that it preserved his vision.

The last sermon he preached in this world was in one of the houses of the Lower Stillwater church, now called "McKinley's." He was then as well as usual, and preached a strong sermon. He read his text without glasses. When he was through with his sermon, he was in the act of taking his seat, but rose again, and, looking over the congregation, he said, "Brethren and friends, it may be that this will be the last time you will ever hear my stammering voice in this house." Then he took his seat, and his statement proved true, for in three weeks from that day the Brethren preached his funeral.

He died March 16, 1877, aged 81 years, 2 months and 9 days. On Sunday morning, March 18, the people assembled at the house where the funeral was preached, and whence his body was conveyed to the cemetery, close by, called the Happy Corner cemetery, located on the farm where he lived and died.

MIRROR MIRACLE.

The following story of the ingenious child mind searching after wisdom, and the parental discomfiture resulting comes to us from the Chicago Tribune:

"Papa, you took the scientific course in college, didn't you?"

"Yes, dear, I spent two years on science."

"When you look in a mirror the left side of your face appears to be the right side, and the right side seems to be the left. The looking-glass reverses it, doesn't it?"

"Yes."

"Then why doesn't it reverse the top and bottom of your face the same way?"

"Why—er—ah."

REMINISCENCES OF A PIONEER PREACHER.

BY OMA KARN.

Surrounded by the ease of modern life, with every facility to help us along, we cannot realize the hardship and constant self-sacrificing circumstances that attended the lives of our ancestors, especially those who stood as witnesses for the Truth and carried the Bread of Life to hungry souls, leaving to us the rich spiritual heritage that we today enjoy.

Prominent among these was Eld. Jacob Mack, grandson of the second Alexander Mack of history. He was born in Pennsylvania about the year 1802, and ordained to the ministry while still quite young. About the time of his ordination his parents moved to what is now the northeastern district of Ohio, the territory lying between these two localities becoming a favorite route to Bro. Mack who made many trips to and fro, scattering the precious seed as he went, each trip enlarging and widening the borders of Zion.

As a speaker, he had more than ordinary ability, with the addition of fine musical talent, well trained by use, as he rode amidst the solitudes of the forest. One of his favorite hymns was, "Joyfully, Joyfully, Onward I Go," the strains of which could often be heard ringing down the leafy aisles, announcing to some lonely backwoods settler the joyful fact that the preacher was coming.

On these trips Bro. James Quinter frequently accompanied him. Meeting-houses were few and far between. Services were held in the houses, barns, or if the weather would permit, in the open air. These two brethren were most frequently called upon to settle any difficulty that arose along the route.

Here to Ohio, had also come Bro. Mack's sister in the flesh, Sister Agnes Mack Leckrone, a most gifted and saintly woman whose chief concern was the Master's cause. When a child, the mother of the writer well remembers lying up in the loft of the old log house, listening to these three counseling together as to what was best for this cause. For there were grave questions to be settled in those days just as there are today.

Together with the hardship, dangers and perplexities accompanying these trips, the accommodations along the way were not what they are today. On one occasion, the two brethren were traveling together, and did not reach the home of the brother where they were to spend the night until quite late. The house was a primitive cabin of one room and a lean-to, and the family an old-fashioned one, numbering anywhere from eight to twelve. The brethren could not help looking curiously about wondering where sleeping accommodations could be made. When bedtime arrived, their host put a chair by the bureau and another on top of it and invited his guests to ascend to the loft above. Bro. Quinter went up with the agility of a schoolboy and then turned and gravely, but humorously, cheered on his companion, who, being a large man, had to pant considerably before he reached the upper room. Several of the children followed, and sleep was sweet in that low, bare loft, for souls were hungry in those days and the pleasure and peace that followed feeding them was great.

Bro. Mack lived to a good age, active to the last. He had the joy of seeing some of the seed he had dropped grow up into strong trees, with deep roots and wide-spreading branches, as well as the coming of many facilities for more active service in the vineyard of the Master he had so faithfully served.

THE BRETHREN CHURCH IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

BY DANIEL PETERS.

The date of the organization of the church in this county is not known, but it was before the Revolutionary War, for my father, who was born in 1782, told me he heard the members say there were brethren here prior to the war. He also said that Brethren Jacob Miller and William Smith were the first two ministers in this county.

They usually held their meetings together, Bro. Miller preaching in the German language and Bro. Smith in the English. The territory where they preached was about their homes and eastward for twenty odd miles. The members at this time were few and far apart. A common dwelling house was large enough for their congregations, even on love feast occasions. It is said that these brethren often took their staff in hand and walked a distance of ten or twelve miles on Saturday evening to places of meeting. On Sunday morning, at nine o'clock, they were assembled to spend a while in reading the Scriptures, exhorting and asking questions. After this the minister would open the meeting and call on a deacon brother to lead in prayer.

The manner of living at that time was quite simple. They manufactured their own clothing. They had no painted houses, plows, or wagons. Some of these conditions existed in my own time. My remembrance of them is very vivid.

The next to help them in their ministerial labors was Bro. Isaac Naff, a minister and elder, who also spoke the German language. The church, seeing the necessity of English preaching, called Bro. John Bowman to the ministry. He became an efficient worker, being able to speak in both the German and English languages. Bro. Bowman was a remarkable man, arousing the interest of those who saw him. He was large and portly, with a very heavy beard, energetic and seeming never to tire in the work of the church. He traveled and preached a great deal, going into several States, always making these long trips on horseback. He was often sent for, on long distances, to preach funerals, and solemnize marriages. His work in this line was greater than that of any before or after him.

At one time a man from North Carolina, by the name of Jacob Faw, not knowing Bro. Bowman's given name or address, but wishing to learn something from him of the Brethren church, wrote a letter, addressed to Preacher Bowman, Rocky Mountain, Va., the countyseat of Franklin County. After receiving a reply from Bro. Bowman, he came to his home on Friday evening, talked with him on Saturday, making known all of his wishes. On Sunday morning he accompanied Bro. Bowman to his preaching point. After the services he was baptized into Christ, I being one of the witnesses of this impressive scene. After Bro. Faw's baptism, he returned to his home in North Carolina.

Soon afterward the Brethren of this county began preaching down there, going two or three times a year, on horseback. In a short time Bro. Faw was called to the ministry, and soon to the eldership. During his administration, with the assistance of others, the church in North Carolina prospered. At the time of his death there were about sixty or seventy members. It is still growing, and is now under the care of Elders J. F. Robertson and C. R. Faw.

As the church increased rapidly, the labors became too great for Bro. Bowman, whereupon Abram Naff and Abram Barnhart were called to the ministry and soon to the eldership. They were co-laborers with Bro. Bowman. Eld. Naff attended a great many funerals also, and often accompanied Eld. Bowman on his long preaching tours. Christian Bowman, born in this county, and a brother to Eld. Bowman, moved to Roanoke County, and was called to the ministry there. He afterwards moved to Floyd County, where he settled. Most of his labors were in Floyd and surrounding counties.

The church in Franklin grew until the communions could no longer be conveniently held in barns and in meadows, hence the necessity of building a house of worship. This was done in 1848, the house being 40x100 feet. Through the preaching of the Franklin brethren a church was organized in Campbell County, with W. I. Hall, a resident elder. At present there are four congregations in this county, with about seven hundred members. There are twenty-five ministers, and eleven of them are elders.

A great many members have emigrated from this county to nearly all parts of the western States. In the year 1870 it was decided to divide Franklin congregation into three, and two houses of worship were built in 1873, viz., Antioch and Bethlehem. Two years ago a congregation was organized at Snow Creek, with about twenty-five members.

The churches in Franklin are united in faith and spirit. We have our co-operation meetings and work together in supplying our mission points in Henry and Pittsylvania Counties.

The elders of the congregations are: Germantown, Abram Barnhart, Henry Ikenberry and R. L. Peters; Bethlehem, Daniel Bowman, Daniel Peters, D. A. Naff and George Bowman; Antioch, Rily Flora, Isaac Bowman, L. E. Brubaker and S. M. Ikenberry.

I have composed this short history by the assistance of our young brother, Enoch Bowman, as penman, as I am blind.

THE ANNUAL MEETING FOR 1909.

The Annual Conference for the Church of the Brethren for 1909 is to be held at Assembly Park, one and one-half miles north of Harrisonburg, Va., on the Southern Railroad. The park contains about twenty acres, all facing toward the sun, and all of it is a most lovely white oak grove, owned and controlled by an association of the United Brethren church and is used for large religious gatherings. A number of permanent buildings are on the ground, all of which will be turned over to the Conference. To accommodate the meeting considerable more building will have to be done.

The water supply will be abundant and is known to be absolutely pure. It is carried through a large pipe by gravitation from a large spring in the North Mountains. Harrisonburg, it is said, leads all the towns of the Shenandoah Valley in the quality of her water supply.

Three railroads touch Harrisonburg, and all trains over the several roads, carrying passengers to the meeting, will stop right at the grounds. The passengers can step off the cars and pass right into the park. The Southern Railroad, on whose line the park is located, agrees to haul the people back and forth from the grounds to the city, agreeing to run trains every few minutes with twelve or fifteen coaches, if necessary.

Harrisonburg, the county seat of

BRETHREN FAMILY ALMANAC.

Rockingham County, the first agricultural county in the old Commonwealth, is a beautiful, enterprising city of about 5,000 people, whose hospitality, in a general way, is well known, and whose friendship towards our people is almost without parallel. They are ready, even eager, to undertake the lodging and caring for all that may attend the Conference, their number notwithstanding. When they were told the probable number that would attend, they remained undaunted.

The Conference convenes on Tuesday morning, June 1. The Standing Committee will meet and organize on Thursday May 27, at 8 A. M. Each district is entitled to one elder on this committee. Districts having 3,500 or more members are entitled to two elders. In the open conference each congregation, however small, may be represented by one delegate, either from the laity or the official body. Congregations having two hundred members have the privilege of sending two delegates. Sisters may serve as delegates from the churches, but they cannot serve on the Standing Committee. Only regularly-ordained elders, or bishops, can serve on this committee. Where there is opposition, it requires a two-thirds vote of the delegates and Standing Committee to carry a question in the open conference.

As early as May 27 meetings on the Conference grounds will probably be held. The program for these meetings will, in due time, be announced in the Gospel Messenger and the Conference "Booklet for 1909." The Committee of Arrangements for the meeting is as follows: Foreman, H. C. Early, Penn Laird; secretary, P. S. Thomas, Harrisburg; treasurer, John Hoover, Timberville; D. H. Zigler, Broadway; W. H. Sipe, Bridgewater; J. M. Kagey, Dayton; Daniel Early, Harrisonburg, all of Virginia. g

MONKEY AND PARROT IN BRAZIL.

In Brazil monkeys and parrots have interests in common. They not only roost in the same trees, but work for mutual benefit. The monkeys cannot easily pick the big Brazil nut husks from the trees, so the parrots gnaw them loose, allowing them to drop, the fall to the ground splitting them. Then the monkeys tear the cracked husks asunder, gather the nuts and divide them with the parrots. Sometimes, when the husks fail to split, the monkeys carry them up to the highest limbs of the tree and let them drop again. Monkey and parrot enjoy their harvest side by side.

MINISTERIAL LIST.

Corrected up to and Including November 8, 1908.

For the convenience of the Gish Fund Department we have found it necessary to arrange the Ministerial List alphabetically instead of under States.

Kept in our large fireproof vaults is a systematically-arranged file, containing a card, 4x6 inches, for each minister in the Brotherhood. On each minister's card are his name and address. If he changes his address, the change is noted on his card. If he orders a book, as provided for by the Gish Fund, that is entered. When a minister dies, or is relieved of his office, his card is removed from the file. If a brother is elected to the ministry a new card, containing his name and address, is placed in the file.

The following list is set up from these cards. Should any mistakes be discovered, write us so we can correct the card list. The corrections made will appear in the Almanac list for 1910.

Floral Wall Mottoes

The lettering is clear and distinct and can be read across the room.

The size, 12 x 16, makes them suitable for use in any home. Unlike many pictures or mottoes they do not fade, and lose their bright and attractive colors. They can readily be dusted should they become a trifle soiled, or can be cleaned whenever desired with a damp cloth.

Ten Mottoes and Ten Designs

1. Be Ye Followers of God as Dear Children.

A very attractive design with groups of children. The poem "Jesus Was a Little Child" neatly printed in one corner adds much to make this picture a very desirable one for the children.

2. Be not Weary in Well Doing.

This design is composed of a beautiful scroll, two birds and their nest, and beautiful flowers, all in colors.

3. Christ Is the Head of this House.

The flower on this motto is a large beautiful orchid, which gracefully overhangs the lettering.

4. God Bless Our Home.

5. In God We Trust.

The design used with these texts is pansies in natural coloring. The lettering is artistically shaded and beautifully harmonizes with the flowers.

6. God Is Our Refuge and Strength.

7. Home, Sweet Home.

This beautiful design is sure to be a good seller. No. 6 represents God as a refuge for the soul, and should be in every Christian home. No. 7 is one of the most popular mottoes known to the English speaking world. It is always in demand. Can be sold anywhere to anybody.

8. Love One Another.

9. The Lord Is my Shepherd.

The motto for these texts has a delightful arrangement of for-get-me-nots and crimson roses on a black background. Very artistic.

10. What Is Home Without a Mother?

This has long been a favorite motto and is still in great demand. The beautiful scroll design, artistic lettering and delicate flowers make this an attractive motto and a good seller.
